Technisource Announces Launch of Provali Group

New IT consulting and outsourcing division created to help clients optimize their technology investments and drive transformational change

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., March 31, 2009 — Technisource, one of the largest technology services providers in North America, announces the launch of the Provali Group, a specialized IT consulting and outsourcing firm. The Provali Group delivers organizations a wide array of IT solutions that encompass all aspects of technology environments.

Comprised of Technisource's Technology Management Services business, the Provali Group's consultative and outsourcing capabilities are geared to help organizations recognize the full value of their IT investments. Provali Group offers both on-site and off-site solutions to deliver services in four key areas: IT strategy, application management, infrastructure management and comprehensive outsourcing.

"As companies are consistently expected to do more with less, IT organizations everywhere are aggressively streamlining operations and cutting costs. At the same time, doing so without sacrificing productivity and maintaining efficiency," said Michael Winwood, president of Technisource. "As a boutique division of Technisource, Provali Group offers a wide range of services that maximize the effectiveness and efficiency of IT systems, infrastructure and operations. Provali Group's thought leadership and consultative approach optimizes company's technology to meet business goals."

Managed through a national network of dedicated specialists, the Provali Group's leadership team encompasses a breadth of experience and IT strategy and outsourcing expertise. Leading this group is John Baschab, who has more than two decades of experience. Baschab joined Technisource in 2005 following the acquisition of Impact Innovations Group, which he co-founded in 1998. While at Technisource, he started the company's IT strategy consulting and outsourcing arm, which forms the basis for Provali Group.

"This change will allow us to more clearly distinguish our consulting and outsourcing business," said Baschab. "We have a proven track record of helping our clients realize the highest return on their technology investments by optimizing their existing IT organization, applications, infrastructure and budget. Provali Group has the right mix of talent, expertise and knowledge to help organizations meet and exceed their information technology goals."
