Technisource Analyst Ruben Canales Takes Top Honor For HDI 2008 Analyst of the Year Award

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 9, 2008 - Technisource®, one of the largest technology services providers in North America and subsidiary of Spherion Corporation (NYSE: SFN), today announced that analyst Ruben Canales has won the 2008 HDI Analyst of the Year Award from the Capital Area chapter. The globally recognized award acknowledges the industry's top first-level support analyst.

Canales, recently promoted to senior help desk analyst, has made a significant impact to the Spherion/International Monetary Fund (IMF) account in less than a year. He has quickly distinguished himself through his commitment to excellence and extraordinary work ethic. In addition to excelling at his individual job duties, Canales serves as a mentor to his support center colleagues by helping them reach their goals.

"Ruben exemplifies the professionalism and quality we offer our clients," said John Migliazza, national director of technology support services of Technisource. "He is knowledgeable, committed to customers and has a terrific attitude. He thrives on challenges and is an excellent problem solver and natural leader. We are delighted he has been recognized with this prestigious award."

Canales is one of Spherion/IMF's most productive analysts in terms of volume of calls, numbers of remedy cases created and first-call resolution.

He was nominated for the award from the Capital Area chapter of HDI and competed against his peers nationally and globally to win this top honor. HDI has more than 7,500 members and 68 local chapters worldwide.

Canales earned his bachelor degree in Computer Science Engineering from the Catholic University of Honduras. In 2004, he immigrated to the United States, enrolled at Georgetown University where he earned A+, Network+, Security+, MCP and CCNA certifications. Prior to his work with Spherion/IMF, he provided help desk technical support to government agencies.

He is a resident of Washington, D.C.
