Technisource Honored as a Recipient of the Arkansas Governor's Family-Friendly Employer Award

LITTLE ROCK, AR - (April 5, 2007) - Winners of the fifth annual Governor's Family-Friendly Employer Awards were recognized at a luncheon today at the Peabody Hotel in Little Rock. Technisource, a national provider of information technology and engineering services, was one of the companies honored.

"Our people are our most valuable asset," said Stephen R. Bova, Chairman & CEO of Technisource. "We treat their interest as a high priority and are dedicated to making Technisource a pleasant, rewarding and family-friendly environment for everyone."

Mayor Bill Purcell of Nashville, Tenn., delivered the keynote address at today's luncheon.

The awards are presented by the Governor's Family-Friendly Employer Initiative, whose mission is to recognize Arkansas employers for establishing and providing resources that support employees in balancing the needs of both work and family.

"When companies implement family-friendly workplace initiatives, everyone wins," Governor Mike Beebe said. "Companies, like those being honored, provide incredible strength to their employees and, in turn, help to promote a better future for the families of our State. They exemplify excellence in their mission to recognize and support the needs of their employees, and I am proud they have chosen Arkansas for their business endeavors."

Companies that were nominated for the awards were asked to provide information regarding issues such as health benefits, work-time options and childcare assistance. If a company did not have formal work-life policies, informal ways of making the work environment as family-friendly as possible were taken into account.
